Equal Pay & COVID-19

In the current climate of COVID-19 crisis, we are all the more aware that women workers continue to experience devastating gender and racial wage discrimination. Women are still more likely to be paid less than men, to live in poverty, and to be victims of sexual harassment or violence in the workplace. Women are more likely to earn a minimum wage, to be penalized for having a child, and to be disproportionately tasked with family care responsibilities, which can compromise a woman’s earning potential.

All these obstacles are all the more prevalent for women of color and immigrant women. Women workers need support now more than ever.

March 31st is #EqualPayDay, and we invite you to take a moment with us to remember how far we’ve come, and how far we have yet to go in the pursuit of #EqualPay.

Join us today on Monday March 30th for PowHer’s Equal Pay Day Webinar. Legal Momentum’s Senior Attorney for Economic Empowerment, Seher Khawaja, will discuss the drivers of gender inequality and New York’s successful legislative responses with other national and New York experts.
